Innovative Concierge Medicine

“Concierge gastroenterology allows me to provide the personalized, unhurried digestive care every patient deserves—with direct access, thoughtful communication, and the time needed to truly listen.”

– Yolandra Johnson, MD

Dr. Yolandra Johnson, MD

Dr. Yolandra Johnson is a board-certified gastroenterologist originally from Columbia, Maryland, who has called Chicago home for more than 25 years. She earned her undergraduate degree from the University of Virginia in Charlottesville before obtaining her medical degree from New York Medical College. She completed both her internship and residency at Yale University–New Haven Hospital, followed by a gastroenterology fellowship at the University of Chicago.

In addition to her clinical work, Dr. Johnson is deeply committed to medical education. She teaches gastroenterology fellows and medical residents and serves as a senior clinician educator at the University of Chicago’s Pritzker School of Medicine.

Dr. Johnson is passionate about delivering timely, collaborative, and highly personalized care, and believes the concierge model allows her to better meet the needs of her patients.
